

Sue Miller '77
"There are three things that must take place for the Word to move: There must be hunger; there must be commitment; there must be knowledge of the urgency of the times. In Modern Church History, I saw this over and over and over again."

Sue Miller, Fifth Corps

"If you don't desire to be a leader, you're in the wrong place. This is where the school of the prophets is happening today...You are the most privileged people in the whole world, and you carry with it the greatest responsibility."

Rev. Bo Reahard

"There is one purpose of the school of the prophets: that of training students to become trustworthy servant of God who could lead a nation in crisis back to God."

Sue Miller, Fifth Corps

THE WORD AT WORK

You can never judge a person by your own standards of renewed-mind believing. What may take renewed mind for one person may not be renewed mind for another because renewed mind involves change."

Franklin Smith, Fifth Corps

I need to look at the growth I've come through--not where I am. I might not be so great in one area; but look at what growth I've had--look how far I've come. Now I can quit condemning myself. My roommates will appreciate the change!"

Nancy Stewart, College Division

Where we fall short and flub it is when we're not in control of our minds--when we let our feelings run loose. I never want to hear why you can't do something; I want to hear what you can do."

Dean Don Wierwille

As long as you're willing to hang on to the strength in your flesh, you'll never tap into God's strength. It's only when your flesh gives up the fight--and believe me, it's going to put up a fight--that you'll have the strength of God."

Rev. Bo Reahard

Whenever God sends anything, there's going to be deliverance in the lives of people. It's people that bring on destruction to themselves. But God has set up His Word so that we can deliver ourselves from ourselves."

Richard Cook, Sixth Corps

LEADERSHIP IN THOUGHT

"Our goal is to see the Word of God in everything. Seek to see the Word in full manifestation."

Rev. Gary Curtis

"The subject of a sentence shows who is speaking, spoken to or spoken about.

"The word predicate, used as a verb, means 'to proclaim, declare, preach or affirm.' The predicate of a sentence, therefore, proclaims, declares, preaches or affirms something about the subject.

ANALOGY:

"Jesus Christ is the subject of the written Word because he is the one speaking, spoken to or spoken about.

"The written Word is the predicate because it proclaims, declares, preaches or affirms Jesus Christ."

Pat Saunders

"A leader does not work an 8 to 5 job; instead he does Colossians 3:23."

Dean Don Wierwille

"Every leader knows he has limitations, but he doesn't worry about it; he just does what has to be done."

Dr. Victor Paul Wierwille

"Our reciprocal relationship to love one another is enhanced as we draw the very best from each other."

Rev. Gary Curtis

"Because God loves you, something good is going to happen to you now!"

"I believe that I can put up with a whole lot of things if someone will just tell me that he loves me."

Franklin Smith, Fifth Corps

"We have problems with words because we are not specific. We are just beginning to learn to communicate with each other and with other people."

Pat Saunders

"The growth of God's Word in your life is more powerful than a locomotive!"

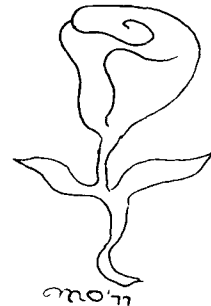

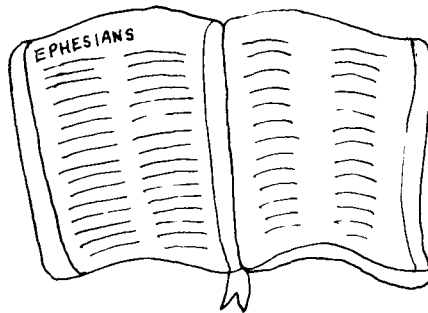

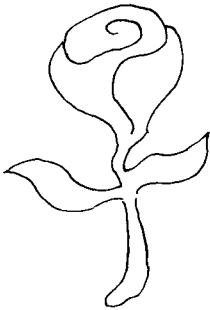

Steve Strzepek, Sixth Corps

"Every program we have here is for overcoming fear."

Randy Peugh, Seventh Corps

"God's commitment to us is the 900 promises."

Marsha Dietlin, Fourth Corps
